Furniture in the communal kitchen

Here you can find out what furniture is included in furnished accommodation.

If you live in a corridor room, where you don’t have cooking facilities, there is always a communal kitchen, which you share with the other tenants in the corridor. This kitchen is furnished with standard items of furniture, which may vary somewhat from one building to the next, but the standard furniture comprises:

- A kitchen table for six persons
- 0.8 kitchen chairs per person (not everyone uses the kitchen at the same time, but should this be the case, tenants can bring in extra chairs from their rooms).
- A light above the kitchen table.

Tenants have their own shelf in the kitchen larder, fridge and freezer. Please note that no household appliances are included. You buy and take care of these yourself.

SSSB spring-cleans the communal areas once a year for the benefit of corridor room tenants. Otherwise, the tenants themselves are responsible for cleaning these areas on a regular basis. Tenants must buy their own cleaning materials and utensils.

If you need help in organising the responsibility for cleaning etc., in your corridor, please contact your house caretaker.

It is important to know that it is forbidden for tenants to connect up refrigerators/washing machines or dishwashers in communal areas. This increases electricity consumption and we may have to raise the rent to cover the costs. It may also cause the electricity network to overload, since the wiring in the property is designed for a specific electricity consumption. Damage caused by tenants incorrectly connecting up electrical appliances is not covered by their home insurance.
